The most obvious variations in human teeth occur in the upper central incisors. Examination of over one thousand specimens from all parts of the world showed wide and marked variations in all races, with only vague indications of racial peculiarities. Arranging these teeth according to the most striking peculiarities and resemblances it soon became apparent that there are three very distinct forms of human central incisors. Class 1, with sides parallel for more than half their length; Class 2, with sides rapidly converging from the cutting edge toward the root; Class 3, with a double curve on one, and sometimes on both sides. The great majority are various blendings of these typed forms, but in most teeth one or the other is clearly dominant. An examination of the skulls in the large collection of the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of London showed all three of these types of teeth...
