Excerpt: . . . in showing the effect upon the waters of Kayade-rosseras creek of the various wastes discharged into it. Samples Taken from Saratoga Springs Storm Water Sewer In the chemical sample taken at the mouth of the storm water sewer, the high chlorine figure would suggest the discharge into this sewer of domestic sewage. The odor is consistent with that found at the manhole below the gas works and points to the pollution by tar and oily matters which are introduced during the flow through the yards of the gas works. The two bacteriological samples, one taken at the mouth, of the Saratoga Springs storm water sewer and one at the first manhole above the mouth of the sewer, are as consistent as could be expected from the consideration of the different conditions under which the two samples were taken. The interpretation of both the bacteriological and the chemical analysis is rendered rather indeterminate, however, by the fact that this storm water sewer not only has been used formerly as a combined sewer, but is still used as a storm and street water sewer which is liable to receive organic and fecal matters from street washings. Greater reliance is therefore placed upon the high chlorine figure and the data obtained by physical inspection of the flow in this sewer. Samples Taken from Saratoga Springs Storm Water Sewer Above and Below Yards of the Gas Works The introduction of foreign matter into the sewer during its flow...
