Many, if not most, of those troops who had joined the queen, had little inclination to fight in Bothwells cause. She therefore recommended him to fly from the field of action; an advice which he was not slow in following, riding to Dunbar as fast as he could, and from thence escaping by sea. Mary surrendered herself, upon promise of respect and kind treatment, and was conducted to the headquarters of the confederate army. On the next evening, the 16th June, 1567, escorted by a strong armed force, she was conveyed from Holyrood to the castle of Lochleven, and imprisoned in that rude and inconvenient tower, where there was scarce room to walk fifty yards; and not even the intercession of Queen Elizabeth, who seems for the time to have been alarmed at the successful insurrection of subjects against their sovereign, could procure any mitigation of her captivity. There was a proposal to proceed against the queen as an accomplice in Darnleys murder, and to take her life under that pretence. But the Lords of the Secret Council resolved to adopt somewhat of a gentler course, by compelling Mary to surrender her crown to her son, then an infant, and to make the Earl of Murray regent during the childs minority. Deeds to this purpose were drawn up and sent to the castle of Lochleven, to be signed by the queen. Lord Lindsay, the rudest, most bigoted, and...
