Some relative of his had just died, and he described the way in which they had treated him, stuffing the panchagavya into his mouth, etc., probably hastening his death.1 April 29. Went to see Sankarappa, who, I had heard, was very ill. Found him very thin and ill, not having tasted food for many days. Disease--inflammation of the lungs. He seemed aware of his situation, said that he trusted in God, and seemed earnest in saying that he depended on the Saviour, clasping his hands together when this was referred to. When I came away, he asked me to pray for him. I talked to many who were standing round. Their minds seemed very dark. The doctor said he must put a blister on. This alarmed them much, but Sankarappa made no objection. He said he left his poor body entirely in the doctor...
